Thought. Control.

If you can't control your thoughts, there's no chance you can control anything external. Thought control is the foundation of everything else – getting laid, getting paid, getting ripped, and whatever else you're striving for.

I recently read “Pimp: The Story Of My Life” by Iceberg Slim. If you haven't read it, I STRONGLY recommend it. It's an amazing book with an absolutely insane story – and as a bonus, you will learn a lot about female psychology. At one point in the book, Slim is talking to an older, more experienced pimp, who lays this advice on him:

“Always remember, whether you be sucker or hustler in the world out there, you've got that vital edge if you can iron-clad your feelings.

“I picture the human mind as a movie screen. If you're a dopey sucker, you'll just sit and watch all kinds of mind-wrecking, damn fool movies on that screen.

“Son, there is no reason except a stupid one for anybody to project on that screen anything that will worry him or dull that vital edge.

“After all, we are the absolute bosses of that whole theatre and show in our minds. We even write the script. So always write positive, dynamic scripts, and show only the best movies for you on that screen whether you are pimp or priest.”

Keeping control of your thoughts is the most important ingredient to success.

If you can't control your thoughts, there's no chance you can control anything external. Thought control is the foundation of everything else – getting laid, getting paid, getting ripped, and whatever else you're striving for.

I'm not a big fan of “affirmations” – but the one affirmation I do repeat to myself is this:

“I am in complete control of my thoughts. Nothing negative gets in without my permission.”

I advise you to write that down somewhere.

Any time you have a negative thought — banish it with that affirmation. The thing is, it’s a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Are you really in complete control of your thoughts? Probably not. But the more you tell yourself that you are, the more you will be.

As a man who wants to live large (mack the finest women; eat at the nicest restaurants; live the playboy lifestyle) negativity is a luxury for chumps that you simply cannot afford.

The way I look at it now, it doesn’t matter how completely fucked up my life situation gets, how much money I lose in business, or what girl goes cold on me — my mind is a party, and negative thoughts simply aren’t invited.

Let suckers enjoy their negative thoughts and their complaints. A man who wants more out of life has got to have that “Vital Edge” ... And if you keep at it for a few weeks, you’ll find that being STRICT in keeping negative thoughts out of your head will give you a level of PHYSICAL ENERGY and EXUBERANCE that is similar to being high on drugs.
